Senator Schwank to join Governor Mifflin students in celebrating Distinguished Women of Pennsylvania

Who: 4th grade students at Mifflin Park Elementary School and State Sen. Judith Schwank (D-Berks)

What: Governor Mifflin's 4th grade classes at Mifflin Park Elementary will get the first look at a new publication celebrating Pennsylvania's most influential and notable women. Distinguished Women of Pennsylvania, a booklet created and published by Sen. Judith Schwank's office, celebrates the accomplishments of women in Pennsylvania in the areas of the arts, athletics, government, literature, science, and social reform. There are brief biographies detailing each woman's impact, from Kevlar inventor Stephanie L. Kwolek to pop superstar Taylor Swift. Sen. Schwank will unveil the booklet to Governor Mifflin students as part of Women's History Month.

"We are lucky that many talented and fascinating women have called Pennsylvania their home. This book will introduce you to those women and hopefully inspire you to follow your own dreams," Schwank said as part of the booklet's dedication.

Students will have the opportunity to discuss the booklet with the senator and will also participate in a question and answer session.

Where: Mifflin Park Elementary School
598 Governor Drive, Shillington

When: Tuesday, March 13 at 9:15 a.m.
